

ABSTRACT

A hydrogen supply system is provided for a fuel cell that can increase the cooling water temperature without hydrogen consumption at ignition by increasing the temperature of the cooling water by using heat from a reaction between a hydride and 5 water.